A family field trip exposes the shocking truth behind your child's public school!

If you're not ready to take a hard look at the true state of public education, you will want to avoid this unflinching and highly controversial documentary. But that would be a mistake!

Nearly 90% of Christian children attend a public school. Their families have vested interest in all that happens there. Join Scottish filmmaker Colin Gunn, a home school father of seven, on a field trip of a lifetime. Driving an old school bus, Colin and family travel across America, asking questions about the origins and social impact of America's public education system. Colin asks:

- Who established the American public school system?
- Are my kids physically and morally safe in the schools?
- Are the public schools religiously neutral?
- Should Christians try to be "salt and light" in public schools?
- Can the public school system be fixed or redeemed?

Featuring interviews with whistle blower teachers, administrators, students, parents and others, this film is part documentary, part testimonial, and totally captivating. Above all, it is both an encouragement and challenge to the millions of Christians who need to know what God's Word says about the discipleship and training of the next generation.
